

FARM ELECTRICAL SAFETY

To ensure a safer farm environment, SafeElectricity.org recommends the following tips to avoid electrical accidents on the farm:

- Start each morning by planning your day's work and being aware of potential electrical hazards.
- Exercise caution and maintain a "360" awareness near power lines.
- Use spotters when operating large machinery near power lines.
- Lower equipment extensions, portable augers or elevators before moving or transporting equipment.
- Never attempt to raise or move power lines to clear a path.
- Regularly inspect electrical cords, plugs and equipment for damage.
- Hire qualified electricians for working on electrical systems.
- Before constructing a new grain bin (or moving an existing bin), be sure to contact Nolin to review the site-specific safety clearance considerations and your electrical service requirements.

It is essential that if you are on equipment that comes in contact with a power line, do not exit the equipment. Electricity can run through the equipment and surrounding ground, so it is important to keep others at least 50 feet away from the equipment and contact your power provider. If the equipment is on fire and you must exit, jump completely clear of the vehicle with both feet together. Hop as far away as possible keeping your feet together.

Help make sure everyone gets home safely to their loved ones this spring and throughout the year by maintaining farm electrical safety awareness. For more tips and other resources, visit www.nolinrecc.com.
